Item 8.01 Other Information

On October 17, 2005, our wholly-owned indirect subsidiary, El Paso Natural Gas Company (EPNG) announced the expiration of its consent agreement with the Navajo Nation covering rights-of-way crossing lands held by the United States in trust for the Nation. On January 17, 2006, EPNG announced it had reached an interim agreement with the Navajo Nation extending the tribal consent agreement from October 17, 2005 to December 31, 2006, which allowed negotiations on a long-term renewal to continue.

On May 14, 2008, EPNG and the Navajo Nation executed a preliminary agreement on the fundamental economic terms of a tribal consent extension through October 17, 2025. Under the preliminary agreement, EPNG will make payments to the Nation covering the period from January 1, 2007 through October 17, 2008. The parties also undertake to achieve, in good faith, a final agreement by June 30, 2008. The final outcome of those efforts cannot be determined at this time.

Approximately 900 looped miles of the northern mainline of our pipeline system traverse lands held in trust by the United States for the Navajo Nation. Those lands are the subject of various right-of-way agreements between us and the United States, with the consent of the Navajo Nation.
