Sources: Bloomberg, 2012 Estimates are Bloomberg consensus

A new set of comps

Oshkosh management has recently argued that their low SGA margins relative to a peer group should be a positive benchmark

SGA margins alone do not drive shareholder returns

Compared to that same peer group

Oshkosh has:

The

MOVE without urgency

The company has claimed they have taken decisive action and initiated what was allegedly a comprehensive review but recently stated that the primary result of that review was simply business model reaffirmed

As a shareholder, we would expect, given recent unprecedented "challenges, Oshkosh would look for ways to enhance shareholder value and drive operating performance rather than continuing with the existing business model

How did this reaffirmation help shareholders? It seems to us that the only beneficiary is the management team who has allegedly been reaffirmed

The company has disclosed their time frames and goals for restructuring activities

by a

which seems to

be

simply

recovery

through

absorption

fixed

costs;

it

is

not

clear

what

portion

if any is actually related to reduction of costs

The company has stated that their manufacturing footprint rationalizations (20% reduction on a company that has

over

$7

Billion

in

sales)

will take 5
years
to generate
$33
million
savings

In our opinion this calls into question the company's ability to generate any meaningful cost savings on a going forward basis

A more balance board

The company has criticized the Icahn slate for lacking experience in Defense and Construction Equipment though the assertion is factually inaccurate

Mr. Alapont was formerly President/CEO of Iveco which built defense, fire and construction products

Mr. Intrieri is on the board of Motorola Solutions which sells to municipal, federal and defense customers

Mr. Krongard spent several years as Executive Director for the CIA

None of Oshkosh board members have substantial experience in construction equipment

None

board
members
that we are

(other
than

Relative track records

The company has criticized Icahn's investment track record

We believe the Icahn track record speaks for itself

Apparently Icahn and Oshkosh had a different strategy for weathering the turbulent markets of 2011

Oshkosh stock was lower at the end of 2011 than it was at the end of 2003

From 2007-2011 Oshkosh stock was down 55.84%

Oshkosh has experienced a surprising amount of turnover at the division head level in the last 5 years

heads (including
Szews
on an interim
basis)

with
two recent
appointees
being outsiders

JLG
Szews (for 5 months after the acquisition) and two other division heads

Fire & Emergency
at least 4 different division heads

Purchasing / Procurement 3 different heads, the last two outsiders

Manufacturing
Two different heads, most recently an outsider, the second of which recently left the company

The inability to maintain stability or source management internally may contribute to operational instability All divisions are currently run by executives with sales/marketing background and the company has lost two separate manufacturing chiefs in the last few
