Talking points: T-Mobile and Sprint Announce Post-Merger Plans to Build Five New T-Mobile Customer Experience Centers

On Wednesday, Jan. 30, T-Mobile and Sprint announced plans to build five new state-of-the-art Customer Experience Centers around the United States, pending the close of the proposed merger to become the New T-Mobile. The first center will be located in Overland Park, Kan.

We've said from day one: the merger is a job creator.

As you read in Michel's email to all employees Wednesday, Sprint and T-Mobile announced plans to build five new state-of-the-art Customer Experience Centers around the United States. The first will be located in Overland Park, Kan.

The Overland Park Customer Experience Center will be an addition to the Sprint campus, which was previously announced as HQ2.

HQ2 will house a variety of the New T-Mobile's business support functions and teams.

Locations for the new T-Mobile's additional four Customer Experience Centers have not been announced.

Each of the new Customer Experience Centers will create an average of 1,000 new jobs.

For now, Customer Care will continue to operate business as usual.

The new Customer Experience Centers:

The new centers will offer customers T-Mobile's complete Team of Experts (TEX) service.

TEX is a personalized, team-based approach to wireless customer service.

When a postpaid wireless customer calls or messages the new T-Mobile, they are directed straight to a team of highly-skilled, tight-knit people who are specifically dedicated to them and others in their area.

TEX teams include specialists who can handle a wide range of topics and, when needed, will work with local retail and engineering to solve even the most complex issues.

The TEX model will be deployed in all combined New T-Mobile Customer Experience Centers.

Job Creation:

Building new care centers, and expanding two existing T-Mobile care centers will cumulatively create up to 5,600 additional American customer care jobs by 2021.

The New T-Mobile will employ 7,500 more customer care professionals in 2024 than the stand-alone companies would have.

Those employees will be eligible to receive benefits and opportunities such as significant management preparation experience, career development paths and college tuition reimbursement.

Note: The completion of the combination remains subject to regulatory approvals and certain other customary closing conditions and is expected to occur during the first half of 2019. Additional information regarding T-Mobile's merger with Sprint can be found at: www.NewTMobile.com.
