The Reporting Persons may take any other action with respect to the Company or any of its debt or equity securities in any manner permitted by law.

Exhibit B
Letter to Teton Energy Corporation

The Board of Directors of Teton Energy Corporation (“Teton”)
410 17th St.
Suite 1850
Denver, CO 80202

Wednesday, June 6, 2007

Dear Sirs:

We are now one of the largest stockholders of Teton Energy. We are writing this letter in order to convey our thoughts on stockholder value and to suggest ways to achieve an increased valuation for Teton’s stock. To date, we believe that the Board of Directors has failed in all respects to enhance value for the company’s shares. You are probably aware that Teton’s shares trade at less than half the value conservatively estimated by a nationally recognized investment bank. Moreover, in our opinion, the current market capitalization is approximately 35% of break-up value. We find it remarkable that a company with such highly visible assets and prominent partners could trade at just a fraction of break-up value in one of the most ebullient markets for energy stocks in the past twenty years.

Although credit is due to management and the Board for successfully maneuvering the company out of Russia and into the current oil and natural gas investments in the United States, the congratulations abruptly end there. Since the beginning of 2006, the shares of Teton have fallen by more than 20% (despite impressive success and progress in the field) while the shares of most energy companies have appreciated strongly. At the same time, management and the Board have been rewarded handsomely with common stock grants and cash bonuses that, in our opinion, are excessive and unwarranted. Based on the performance of the shares, despite impressive fundamental news, we can only surmise that investors have lost total confidence in the Board’s ability or willingness to represent the interests of the public stockholders.

What we find most egregious was the recent convertible offering. This offering was nothing short of astoundingly dilutive to current stockholders due to excessive warrant coverage. Then, lo and behold, Teton announced that it would seek to monetize all or portions of its appreciated assets in order to finance future activities. Why this is being done after the convertible offering remains a mystery, as the dilution from the warrants associated with the convertible offering could have been avoided by pursuing this course of action BEFORE doing a stockholder dilutive transaction.

While we believe monetization of some projects is a step in the right direction, it does not fully address the issue of stockholder value because we believe that partial sales will result in inferior valuations and substantial confusion regarding the company’s business model. Moreover, asset sales could expose the company to tax liabilities that would likely be avoided by a sale of all the company’s shares to a larger energy company or energy investment vehicle. Therefore, we believe that a sale of the entire company in a tax-efficient manner is in the best interests of all stockholders. In our opinion, the net present value of the company is greater in a sale now than it will be in 2-3 years. I might remind you that you are all in fact stockholders that would benefit from this course of action as well.

We have given much thought to management's intentions to move Teton from a financial investor in energy projects to an operator and we can find no compelling reason to pursue that strategy. Moving to operator status involves risks and financial commitments that we do not feel are prudent or desired by our fellow stockholders. It will also further stretch out the timeline for attaining value for all stockholders. The same values can be created now with a sale of the company, without the risks associated with becoming an operator. If the Board has so decided that large-scale investments in self-operated projects are desirable, then we respectfully suggest that it be pursued in a new business venture away from Teton.

We also respectfully request that the company's existing Board be modified to include members with greater sensitivity to stockholder interests. We note that the company's current Chairman of the Board has no experience of any kind in a public company other than Teton.

We understand that we are not the only stockholders that share these views. We intend to seek professional advice in the coming weeks to determine the most efficient and effective way to accomplish our goal of realizing full value for all stockholders.

As well, we look forward to and invite discussions with the Board of Directors and management of Teton Energy Corporation.

Respectfully,

Thomas Donino, Partner
