Lazard Global Total Return & Income Fund, Inc.

Investment Overview

Dear Shareholder,

We are pleased to present this semi-annual report for Lazard Global Total Return & Income Fund, Inc. ("LGI" or the "Fund"), for the period ended June 30, 2006. LGI is a diversified, closed-end management investment company that began trading on the New York Stock Exchange ("NYSE") on April 28, 2004. Its ticker symbol is "LGI."

The Fund has been in operation for a little over two years, and we are pleased with LGI's overall performance since inception. We believe that the Fund has provided investors with an attractive yield and diversification, backed by the extensive experience, commitment, and professional management of Lazard Asset Management LLC (the "Investment Manager" or "Lazard").

Portfolio Update (as of June 30, 2006)

For the second quarter of 2006, the Fund's Net Asset Value per share ("NAV") performance was flat, outperforming the Morgan Stanley Capital International (MSCI®) World® Index, which declined 0.5%. Similarly, for the year-to-date, the NAV return of 8.2% has outperformed the benchmark return of 6.1%. And since inception, the Fund's annualized NAV return of 13.3% compares favorably to the benchmark's return of 12.4%. Shares of LGI ended the second quarter of 2006 with a market price of $19.58, representing an 11.8% discount to the Fund's NAV of $22.19. The Fund's net assets were $213.2 million as of June 30, 2006, with total leveraged assets of $297.0 million, representing 28.2% leverage.

We believe that LGI's investment thesis remains sound. The Fund's NAV returns, since its inception and in 2006, have outperformed the Index. Second quarter performance was affected by the sharp sell-off in global markets, which continued into early June. A rebound came late in the month and global markets ended the quarter roughly flat. While the smaller, short-duration currency and debt portion of the Fund has experienced only moderate positive returns thus far in 2006. It has been a meaningful positive contributor to performance for the Fund since its inception.

As of June 30, 2006, 65.7% of the Fund's total leveraged assets consisted of global equities and 34.1% consisted of emerging markets currency and debt instruments, while the remaining 0.2% consisted of cash and other assets.

Declaration of Dividends

Pursuant to LGI's level distribution policy, the Fund's Board of Directors has declared a monthly dividend distribution of $0.1042 per share on the Fund's outstanding stock each month since inception. The first dividend was paid on July 23, 2004. This distribution level represents an annualized market yield of 6.4% based on the share price of $19.58 at the close of NYSE trading on June 30, 2006. Since inception, LGI's distributions have not included any return of capital to the Fund's stockholders.

On behalf of Lazard, we thank you for your investment in Lazard Global Total Return & Income Fund, Inc. and look forward to continuing to serve your investment needs in the future.

Message from the Portfolio Managers

Global Equity Portfolio
(65.7% of total leveraged assets)

The Fund's equity portfolio is invested primarily in equity securities of large, well-known global companies with strong financial productivity at attractive valuations. Examples include GlaxoSmithKline, a global, research-based pharmaceutical company based in the United Kingdom; Bank of America, a holding company that provides banking and non-banking financial services and products in the U.S. and internationally; Nokia Corp., the Finnish manufacturer of mobile telephones, enhanced communicators, entertainment and gaming devices, and media and imaging telephones; and Total SA, the French-based energy supplier that explores for, produces, refines, transports, and markets oil and natural gas.

Companies held in the global equity portfolio are all based in developed-market regions around the world.

As of June 30, 47.2% of these stocks were based in North America, 22.9% were from continental Europe (not including the U.K.), 19.1% were from the U.K., and 10.8% were from Japan. The global equity portfolio is similarly well diversified across a number of industry sectors. The top two sectors, by weight, at June 30, were financials (31.3%), which includes banks, insurance companies, and financial services companies, and information technology (19.0%), a sector that encompasses industries involved in the design, development, installation, and implementation of information systems and applications, including hardware, software, IT services, and media-related companies. Other sectors in the portfolio include consumer discretionary, consumer staples, energy, health care, industrials, and telecommunications services. The average dividend yield on the global equity portfolio was 2.3% at June 30.

Global Equity Market Review

The rally in global equities continued through the first half of the second quarter, before stocks fell sharply amid concerns over a potential acceleration in inflation and its implications for future monetary policy. Comments from the newly installed Federal Reserve ("Fed") Chairman, Benjamin Bernanke, regarding the "unwelcome" increase in prices, called into question the prevailing belief that the cycle of monetary tightening in the U.S. was nearing an end. Concerns that the Fed would continue to aggressively raise rates fueled fears of a material global economic slowdown and a sharp contraction in liquidity, as central banks around the world tightened monetary policy. Not surprisingly, the sectors of the market that had performed best in recent years, such as economically sensitive groups and companies in the fragile economies of Japan and Germany, were hardest hit in the sell-off. Smaller-cap stocks underperformed for the quarter, after significantly outperforming their larger peers in recent years. Smaller, less-liquid markets, such as Greece and Austria, also lagged in the decline. In contrast, the U.S. and U.K. markets proved resilient. From a sector perspective, defensive groups, such as utilities and consumer staples, outperformed. Commodity producers were volatile during the quarter and were particularly hard hit in the sell-off. However, they performed in line with the broad index for the overall quarter, thanks to their strength early in the period. Energy stocks outperformed, as the price of oil proved resilient and ended the quarter near an all-time high.

What Helped and What Hurt LGI

Stock selection in technology helped the Fund's performance in the second quarter, as one of its global equity portfolio's largest holdings, Oracle, reported better-than-expected earnings. The company's latest results prove that it is doing a good job of executing its acquisition strategy. In addition, customers are embracing its broader product offerings, potentially helping the company to gain market share from its largest competitor. The company also announced that it plans to use the solid free cash flow that it has generated to repurchase $4 billion in stock over the year. Consumer discretionary holdings detracted from performance based on concerns that higher interest rates and a slowing housing market would hurt consumer spending. However, we believe that valuations in this sector are attractive.

Emerging Market Currency and Debt Portfolio (34.1% of total leveraged assets)

The Fund also seeks enhanced income through investing in high-yielding, short-duration¹ (typically, under one-year) emerging market forward currency contracts and local currency debt instruments. At June 30, this portfolio consisted primarily of forward currency contracts (81.3%), and a smaller allocation to sovereign debt obligations (14.1%) and structured notes (4.6%) and had an average duration of approximately 5.5 months, with an average yield of 8.8% .2

At June 30, the Fund's emerging market currency and debt holdings were highly diversified across 30 countries within Eastern Europe (17.2%), Asia (27.0%), Latin America (21.3%), the Middle East (7.7%), Africa (16.9%), and the Commonwealth of Independent States and Baltic countries (9.2%), and with 1.0% in other assets.

Emerging Market Currency and Debt Market Review After a solid first quarter characterized by strong performance and buoyant risk appetite, emerging markets witnessed a tumultuous second quarter. As liquidity continued to be drained slowly by many central banks across the globe, market technicals, risk reduction, and consequent volatility were the important second-quarter themes. Emerging markets currencies experienced directional pressure on the massive outflow of foreign equity capital, and FX volatility rose in the second quarter. Losses were most significant across countries perceived to be overvalued, high-beta to global risk appetite, or simply crowded.

During the past few years, a large number of emerging markets countries have experienced record dollar inflows from current account and/or capital account surpluses, which should have pressured their currencies stronger. Yet, in the growth versus inflation policy trade-off, most central banks chose growth, as central banks absorbed most inflows by increasing FX reserves and expanding money supply, preventing currency appreciation and preserving external competitiveness. Inflation has been rising (albeit from very low levels), and central bank officials are now being forced to take note of the immense size of their reserves (mostly in U.S. dollars) and the currency exposure this implies. Many of these countries are now curtailing these increasingly expensive intervention policies, and are hiking rates to address currency volatility and restore market confidence. Furthermore, rising rates in the developed markets have also pressured emerging market central bankers to tighten monetary policy.

What Helped and Hurt LGI

The portfolio's large exposure to Russia was the top contributor to performance, driven primarily by the 3.2% appreciation of the currency. Russia continues to see massive dollar inflows, primarily due to oil exports. The Central Bank intervened by accumulating dollars to prevent these inflows from pressuring the ruble stronger. This led to increasing money supply and, consequently, rising inflation. However, with inflation already close to 11% in Russia, there has been a refocus on inflation control, allowing the ruble to appreciate.

Romania was also a leading contributor to performance. The National Bank of Romania has pursued its inflation-targeting policy with added fervor this year, after last year's policy of easing rates to deter yield-seeking inflows (even in the face of persistent inflation) led to some loss of credibility. The Central Bank hiked rates in the second quarter and significantly raised reserve requirements.

Detracting from performance was the portfolio's exposure to Turkey. While previously successful in controlling inflation, Turkey's Central Bank came under scrutiny earlier in 2006. Turkey's stock market has more than a 60% foreign-investor presence, led by hedge funds and private investors, and many of these investors rushed to the exits, when the stock market began to fall, and risk budgets were slashed. The Central Bank's downplaying of the sell-off disappointed the already nervous market, and a subsequent release of the inflation numbers confirmed the market's fears and fueled further panic selling. The Central Bank finally raised rates and announced it would intervene to support the currency. Turkish assets then recovered some of their losses, but still ended the quarter weaker.

Exposure to Colombia also hurt portfolio performance, as capital flight from the fixed income and equity markets led to a sell off in Colombia's peso.
