FEDERAL RESERVE APPROVAL ON MERGER

Final Major Hurdle in Merger Process Cleared Following Shareholder Approvals

"We are extremely pleased to have received this approval from the Federal Reserve, which represents the final major hurdle in the merger process," said L.M. Baker Jr., Wachovia chairman and chief executive officer, and chairman of the new Wachovia. "We look forward to closing the merger and building a premier financial services organization. The new Wachovia will be the nation's fourth largest bank holding company with a strong presence in 11 states and Washington, D.C., a nationwide brokerage operation, great opportunities in growth businesses such as wealth management and capital markets, and best-in-class products and services for all customers."

"We are confident that our integration efforts, which will be disciplined and unhurried, will bring together our two strong companies with superior customer service as the bedrock," said G. Kennedy Thompson, First Union chairman and chief executive officer, and chief executive of the new Wachovia. "We look forward to the creation of the new Wachovia."

The companies anticipate closing the transaction in early September, after final certification of the Wachovia shareholder vote and a mandatory 15-day waiting period following the Federal Reserve approval.
